This year, the University of La Verne has much to celebrate. In October, we opened the Randall Lewis Center for Well-Being and Research, followed quickly by the dedication of the Ludwick Center for Spirituality, Cultural Understanding, and Community Engagement in November. Made possible by Create the Future: the Campaign for the University of La Verne, these forward thinking initiatives embody our cherished core values of educating and nurturing the whole student, honoring diversity and inclusion, and practicing civic and community engagement—preparing all for successful professional and personal growth post-graduation.

As this Impact Report illustrates, it is because of generous support from alumni and friends like you that we can pursue this visionary work. Our campaign has now raised over $100 million for the university, and we remain on target to reach our goal of $125 million. It is because of YOU that our students have access to more knowledge, skills, and resources than ever before.

On behalf of our students, alumni, faculty, staff, and Board of Trustees, I offer our heartfelt gratitude for your unwavering commitment and support.

Sincerely,

Devorah Lieberman, PhD

Changing Lives

“As a first-generation student, I wanted to attend a university that embraces the individual that I am and provides me with opportunities that help me reach my goals. The University of La Verne is a second home to me. The professors, counselors, and staff have all been welcoming and helpful to me, and the generous financial assistance I receive keeps me on track to succeed.”

Alondra Campos,
Freshman, Journalism major

“The University of La Verne provides a supportive and caring environment that teaches students to be compassionate and engaged individuals. The professors care greatly about the success of every student, often going out of their way to provide assistance. In addition, the scholarships funded by generous donors ensure that each student can pursue their education without having to take on a financial burden.”

Abdulrahman Badran,
Senior, Biology major

La Verne is Big News!

U.S. News & World Report this year ranked the University of La Verne fourth in the nation for social mobility, recognizing the university’s success in helping students from low-income families achieve equity with graduates from families with stronger financial backgrounds.

A New York Times opinion piece on the nation-wide college dropout crisis credits the University of La Verne with achieving top graduation rates by understanding the needs of its students:

By our measure, La Verne is one of the country’s most impressive colleges, with an expected graduation rate of 53 percent and an actual rate of 74 percent.

David Leonhardt and Sahil Chinoy, “The College Dropout Crisis,” May 23, 2019

The Washington Post recognized the University of La Verne’s success at making the process of transferring credits, notoriously difficult at colleges and universities throughout the United States, much easier for students:

La Verne has transfer agreement plans with 41 community colleges and on-the-spot admission for students from 17 of those.

Jon Marcus, “College credits where credit’s due: Schools come around to accepting transfer students’ work,” April 8, 2018
