

The University of La Verne decided to begin fall 2020 instruction remotely after carefully considering public health data and existing state and county health guidelines. Part of the contingency plan for doing business extends to providing academic advising and related workshops in fall semester. Your academic advisors also received this notice so that everyone is lock step with our efforts to communicate, collaborate, and support your academic success at La Verne.

We sectioned off the rest of the email to facilitate reading.

ACADEMIC SUPPORT –WOODY HALL

The Office of Academic Advising in Woody Hall will be minimally staffed or will continue to work remotely to support academic advisors and students with registration-related issues (holds, overrides, etc.), including academic appeals.

Rest assured that we have successfully been working remotely since March 2020 with great success, and continue to support academic advisors and students with overrides, AACs, lift holds, registration, appeals, etc.

We continue to monitor the main office email (advising@laverne.edu), and phone messages (909) 448-4510, and respond accordingly.

ACADEMIC ADVISING:

Academic advising for January Interterm and Spring semester starts on October 5, 2020.

We have communicated with your academic advisors with instructions about how to conduct advising meetings with you. Communicate directly with your academic advisor about scheduling an appointment that is safe and mutually agreeable.

Most academic advisors are using Acuity Scheduling to schedule one-on-one advising appointments. Please visit our website for links to your advisor's personal appointment page: <https://laverne.edu/advising/advisors/>

If your academic advisor currently does not take online appointments, please call or email your academic advisor.
